Art Unit: 2175

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Gropper (United States Patent Application Publication US2002/0049610).

Claim 1: Reference is made to the process described in paragraphs 0093-0133. The system includes a recipient client who has an address book (paragraph 0133). The address book includes contact information (paragraph 0068). A first client sends an e-mail request to a second client to update an address in the address book. The second client makes the update and sends it back to the first client. The address book and its updates end up being sent through and stored at a server (paragraph 0129) which is readable as a gateway. The updates to the address book may be transmitted to wireless clients (paragraph 0149).

Claim 2: The contact information in the address book includes names, mailing addresses and e-mail addresses (paragraph 0093).

Claim 3: The address book and its updates are stored at the server (paragraph 0129). The server includes a database (paragraph 0158).

Claim 4: Paragraph 0159 describes the archiving of received data at the server. An archive is considered to be equivalent to a directory structure. The data sent to the server includes user data.

Claim 5: The address book is stored both on the client devices as well as the server communicating with the client devices. The memory on the client device or the server thus becomes the storage device.

Claim 6: Paragraph 0149 describes the wireless devices as wireless PDAs or wireless telephones either of which are readable as pagers.

Claim 7: The address book is modified on the gateway (server) by sending the updates through the server (paragraph 0129) where they are saved on the server.

Claim 8: The system includes an external network (12), which is described as including the Internet (paragraph 0149).

Claim 9: The address modifications are made via the wireless devices (paragraph 0120-0121) and then sent to the server (paragraph 0129).

Claim 10: As described in paragraphs 0093-0133, a first client has a created address book. The first client sends an e-mail to a second client requesting an update. The second client modifies the address book by making the update (paragraphs 0120 and 0121). The updated address is then sent back to the first client (paragraphs 0130-0133).

Claim 11: Modifications are made via the Internet (paragraph 0149).

Claim 12: Modifications to the address book are made by one of the client devices (paragraphs 0120 and 0121).

Claim 13: Modifying the address book may include changing an entry (paragraph 0122).

Claim 14: The user's status can be checked and accepted or blocked at the original client's address book, thus verifying status before permitting any attempt to change to the address book (paragraphs 0094-0095).

Art Unit: 2175

Claim 15: The user's status can be verified at the server level, thus checking the user's status before transmitting the final update back to the client requesting the update (paragraph 0109).

Claim 16: See remarks for claim 6.

Claim 17: See remarks for claim 2.

Claim 18: See remarks for claim 10.

Claim 19: See remarks for claim 11.

Claim 20: See remarks for claim 12.

Claim 21: See remarks for claim 13.

Claim 22: See remarks for claim 14.

Claim 23: See remarks for claim 15.

Claim 24: See remarks for claim 16.

Claim 25: See remarks for claim 2.

Claim 26-29: See remarks for claim 1. Note that an address book update is considered to also read on the concept of sending an address book by reason that an address may be formed by even so much as one address entry.
